BACKGROUND

Lucie worked in politics before she was called to the Bar; at constituency level; for several years at Westminster, for the charity INQUEST (deaths in custody) and with a solicitor specialising in election law. Combining motherhood with a practice in criminal defence, she continues her political work, speaking and writing about policy issues that impact the criminal courts, presently in her role as an Officer of the Criminal Bar Association. She was instrumental in the recent fightback against Extended Operating Hours in the criminal courts, chairing the CBA's working group on court capacity which published a report in December 2020, Report of the Criminal Bar Association Working Group on Court Capacity, incorporating an analysis of why Extended Sitting Hours are a discriminatory system of work.
