FAMILY LAW

Between October 2004 and August 2015, Smita was a practising barrister and member of the family team at Garden Court Chambers. Her practice encompassed all areas of children law and family law, both public and private law disputes, applications for secure accommodation, domestic violence, forced marriage and Brussels II cases; representing local authorities, parents, extended family members, children, young persons and vulnerable adults.

She was regularly instructed in trials or fact-finding hearings: with complex and conflicting expert and medical evidence, historic sexual abuse and non-accidental injuries, cases with concurrent criminal proceedings, special measures and cases with closed and open hearings due to the sensitive nature of the material being put before the court. For over 10 years she trained and supported pupil barristers on their first days in the family court. Smita was an active member of Rights of the Child UK coalition and CEDAW UK women's rights coalition.

INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS

In complement to her domestic practice, Smita worked internationally in human rights and humanitarian law. She has been an expert trainer for UNICEF Nigeria building the capacity of child protection networks across Nigeria, UNDP on a Rule of Law Project in Myanmar and the Bar Human Rights Committee in Ramallah and Nablus, West Bank, Occupied Palestinian Territory.

She has litigated before the European Court of Human Rights, led two successful briefs in Colombia, firstly representing the San Jose de Apartado peace community before the Supreme Court and secondly to the Colombian Constitutional Court on proposed military justice reforms. She held workshops on human rights and family law with lawyers in Algiers, Algeria and Family Court reporters from Iran and contributed to the UK CEDAW report July 2013. From 2013 to 2015, Smita was the lead convenor for Garden Court International, a team of 70 Barristers of varying seniority and practice areas in International Law developing and implementing a strategy for the flourishing development and growth of the team.
